current, and entering the Gulf of Mexi-

A further study of the individual members of the groups of bottle-papers is most instructive, and especially is this true of four bottles cast respectively, in 1854, from the vessels Hestage, Johanna, Charles Colesworth, and Orealia in the region of the Rennell current, which has been supposed to set north and northwest athwart the mouths of the English and St. George's Channels. The direction followed by the bottles from the three first-named vessels would seem to disprove the existence of such a current, while the course of that cast from the Orealia would favor it. It was not possible to explain this course by a series of southerly gales which are shown by the synoptic charts to have prevailed in this region, especially during the month of December, 1854. Other observers, notably the Prince of Monaco, who in his yacht L'Hirondelle made a special study of the surface-drift of this region, have also failed to discover conclusive evidence of the Rennell current.

Bottle-paper "No. 1" of the chart for January, 1856, is one of a very large number of papers thrown overboard by His Highness Prince Monaco from his yacht L'Hirondelle, during her third scientific cruise, extending from latitude 32 degrees 58 minutes N., longitude 35 degrees 25 minutes W., to latitude 45 degrees 50 minutes N., longitude 45 degrees 34 minutes W. Along this line, 50 miles in length, over 500 bottles were dispatched. Paper "No. 1" is remarkable in that it was recovered after a lapse of seven years within a few miles of the spot where another of these bottles was found, the latter being described as "No.
1" of the series published by the United States Hydrographic Office on June 1, 1856.

The various destinations attained by bottles cast adrift just a little north of the Azores shows the uncertainty of the movement of the surface-currents in this region. Thus, of five bottles, all thrown overboard in the summer season, within an area of 100 square miles, one was picked up on the coast of Norway; two on the west coast of Ireland; one on the Spanish and another on the French coast.

It further appears, from the chart for January, 1856, that two bottles starting from the same spot on almost the same day drifted in totally opposite directions, one going far northwards to the Shetland Isles, the other to the west coast of France. But all such discrepancies have been explained in the synoptic charts as due to sudden changes in the direction of forceful winds.

The longest drift recorded is that of 5,500 miles in the case of a bottle cast from the ship Allerton to the south of the Falkland Islands and recovered after an interval of slightly less than three years on the shores of the great Australian Bight.

ANNUAL MEETING

MYRTLE BOAT CLUB

New Officers Elected and

Pleasant Reports Read

Last Night.

The annual meeting of the Myrtle Boat Club took place last evening at the boat house and an election of officers and directors for the coming year was held. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd of oarsmen and their admirers who wear the red and white.
The following officers were chosen: President, A. G. M. Robertson; Vice President,
A. G. M. Robertson; Secretary, John F.
Soper; treasurer, Charles S. Crane; auditor, George C. Harris; captain, Albert Judd; trustees, A. A. Wilder, W.
W. Harris, W. H. Soper. The above constitute the board of directors. A.
Giles, S. Johnson and H. A. Wilder were elected the house committee, in whose hands the good conduct of the club reposed for the ensuing year and upon whose shoulders lie the burdens of the club's social affairs.

Reports of the treasurer and secretary were read. Both show that the club is in fine fettle, both financially and athletically. Captain Judd will appoint a vice captain to assist in the organization of the year's crews. A number of junior men were present and displayed much interest in the plans for future contests. The captain was also authorized to purchase a skill for exercise in conjunction with that gained in the shells. A pair-oared, sliding-seat scull is now on the way to Honolulu from Germany on the ship Paul Isenberg.

CHINESE BANKING SYSTEM.

The insecurity of Chinese houses and the danger from fires make banks of deposit a necessity. All classes in China have bank accounts. The business of the banks is to discount paper, to negotiate bills of exchange, to loan money on land or on personal property and to buy and sell the precious metals. There is no Government limit to their establishment. They sell bills of exchange at short dates to any point in China. The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and other foreign banks have largely interfered with the sale of foreign bills and bills running for a long time. The banks ordinarily, except in Peking, pay interest on deposits, and in Peking, they allow up to the date of withdrawal. The foreign banks also pay interest on deposits, but they stipulate for fixed terms. The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation pays 5 per cent on fixed deposits. The bank, for a consideration, guarantees the paper of its customers.
It sometimes happens here, as elsewhere, that the deposits are ten or fifteen times greater than the capital of the bank.

There exists in Peking a clearinghouse system which will compare favorably with that of New York. Each depositor receives from his banker a book with two columns, in one of which will be entered his deposits, and in the other to his debit all the sums he may disburse. He then sends all his creditors to his banker to be paid, and in the evening he sends his book to his bankers. The next morning the clerks of the various banks get together and indicate in their books the various sums that they are to disburse to or receive for their patrons. The balances are paid in cash, or are left to stand over on interest until the end of the year. It is said that the banks assist each other in case of difficulty, and that they extend the time of payment to any solvent bank requiring it.

But how did you impress the wild Tagalos that you were from Boston?" inquired the steamship captain. "Oh, that was easy," responded the returning anti-imperialist. "I just took a sand. The pointed to my big head and nose-glasses."—Chicago News.

THE REVIEW of the Young Men's Christian Association for February is out and is an interesting number. It contains instructive accounts of the work of the local Association, many foreign notes of interest, and is a readable number generally.

Work is going along smoothly for the gymnasium exhibition to be held in the latter part of April. It will consist of the work done by the different classes.
The Juniors will give a dumb-bell drill and a few games. The Intermediates will work with the evening class. The work will be on different apparatus to show what is done from night to night.
The fencers are doing good work; they have paired off and are to be seen most any afternoon in the gymnasium knocking the spots off each other.

The Association has recently lost three of its members, Frank R. Farrier, Arthur F. Elerath and Raymond Axtell having gone to the Coast to remain.
These three boys took an active interest in the gymnasium work.

The Association will put an outdoor baseball team in the field. Excellent material is at hand and A. J. Coats, the physical director, sees no reason why his men should not make a good run for the championship this season. E. M. Brown and "Old Pat" Gorman will play with the Initials, as well as other very good men.

All the gymnasium class men are requested to be present this evening in order that a flash-light picture of the group may be taken. The committee on the Jubilee Convention is getting together pictures of the educational and gymnasium classes to send to the convention. A photo of the winners of the basketball championship will also be forwarded.

The basketball season opens next Saturday evening, when the first two of the series of League games will be played.
Play commences at 7:30 promptly.
The contending teams will be as follows:

Messrs. Johnson, Kerr, Gribble, Kling, Price, Lutz and Bindler against Messrs.
Moore, Green, Brown, Gorman, Weble, Watson and Dyson.

Messrs. Will Helbron, Burt Helbron, Alameda, Cheatham, Moon, Curtis, Jenkins, Fahey, Larue and Bradley against Messrs. Koepke, Alvarez, Robinson, Petersen, Smith, Lando, Kennedy and Garvin.

The second Pentathlon contest in a series of three will come off on March 8 and it is expected that all records made in the first event will be beaten. Elerath, the winner of the first games of the series, has gone to the Coast and will not compete on this occasion. Ben Clark is looked upon as the probable winner, as matters stand.

The Association holds out no inducements to the men of its various teams, such as free membership, Christmas presents, etc. It is in for clean sport and only bona fide members are chosen as representatives in athletic contests.

DIDN'T BELIEVE HIS FATHER WAS GOVERNOR.

During the late ex-Governor Wol-cott's term of office his youngest son, Oliver, was in one of the primary classes of a school. The teacher was one day asking questions of her little pupils to give them a chance to show what they knew about one thing and another for the entertainment of a lady who was visiting the school, and she finally inquired: "Can any one tell me who is the Governor of Massachusetts?"

No one could tell, not even little Oliver.

The teacher then told every one of the pupils when he got home to ask his father, so as to be ready to tell her the next day. Accordingly, when the class was assembled the following morning, she gave out the question, calling on Oliver to see what he might have to say about it. Oliver answered:

"Pa says he's the Governor. But I don't believe it, 'cause he's always making fun of everythin' so."

HICHOBN'S RISE FROM THE RANKS.

Rear Admiral Hichborn, chief constructor of the navy, was at one time a common employe, at the Boston navy yard. When he became chief of the bureau of construction and repair, with the rank of commodore, he had occasion to pay an official visit to the yard. The day before he was scheduled to call he strolled through the yard without announcing himself. He heard a bell ring and saw the old familiar lines of employes passing about the yard, each man carrying a dinner pail and his movements regulated by the bell. An officer of the yard, recognizing him, then commodore, asked if he desired the commodore's salute when he called the next day. "I have been thinking," said the chief constructor, "of the time when I used to go to work and quit at the sound of that bell. I carried one of those to call the employes and moved at the bidding of the bell. I think the com-modore's salute would be a pleasing contrast to the sounds of the old bell. Yes, you may give the salute when I come tomorrow."

PHONOGRAPH AS A LANGUAGE TEACHER.

That the phonograph would someday be used to teach foreign languages was long ago predicted. The prediction has come true. Records are now made and sent with special textbooks to supplement their use. There is one distinct advantage in this method. Whenever a student wishes to have a particular sound repeated, all he has to do is to set the cylinder back as often as he wants. He can also regulate the speed to suit the progress of his ear. The language-phone, as it is called, is said to be especially good in learning the languages of the far East, which have no alphabetic characters, but only ideographs, and in which so much depends on singular accents and intonations.

RELATIVE CAUSES OF ACCI-DENTS.

The statistics of accidents in France show that in the first month of the last quarter of 1900 the bicycle caused 119, 6 of which were fatal; the automobile 38, with 2 fatalities; on railways there were 145 accidents, including 8 fatal; but the horse, which might be expected in France, easily leads with 967, no less than 83 of which were fatal.
